PROFESSIONAL HISTORY

Rick is a qualified urban planner with 25 years' experience across strategic planning, policy development and development assessment disciplines.

Prior to joining the Ekistics team, Rick worked with the City of Adelaide leading and managing multiple teams with responsibility for the statutory and policy planning, heritage, social planning and reconciliation functions. Rick has a detailed understanding of Local Government administration having led many process and procedure reviews and provided strategic advice to Council to inform its performance of legislative obligations.

Rick has acted as the lead planning advisor for many large and complex urban projects including large scale residential and infill developments, mixed use, industrial land development, community services and commercial developments, parliamentary submissions and major infrastructure projects. Rick has led the preparation of Code Amendments that have enabled city growth and protected heritage assets, including the coordination and facilitation of extensive community engagement.

Rick is an active participant in planning and development industry forums and is an advocate for planning systems that support sustainable, equitable and efficient long-term benefits to communities.

Rick is a current PIA SA Division Committee Member (and Chair - Policy & Advocacy Sub-committee) and has been a member of many reference groups and committees across areas including live music, heritage, airport operations and urban growth.

Rick is known for his calm, considered and collaborative approach. Rick thrives in taking on new challenges and is focused on providing bespoke solutions to customers.
